The provisions of this paragraph apply to employment agreements that follow each other with intervals of no more than six months, regardless of the term of the employment relationship arising from the successive employment agreements and regardless of the number of successive employment agreements underlying the employment relationship. A maximum of 12 years is applicable to the above provisions.
3. The first fixed-term employment agreement ends by operation of law on the expiry of the agreed term.

Explanatory notes to Article 6, paragraph 3

Due to the provisions in the Work and Security Act, the end of a fixed-term employment agreement should be announced at least one month in advance. The end of the fixed-term employment agreement should be announced in the manner as laid down in Section 7:668 (1) of the Dutch Civil Code.

If the notice was not given in time the employment agreement will continue by operation of law for a period of one year, unless the Employee gives notice (as referred to in paragraph 6 of this article). The date on the proof of registration will decide if the notice was given in time.

Explanatory notes to Article 6, paragraph 5

The Employer can give the notice to the Employee by means of registered mail up to and including 31 March. The notice may thus reach the Employee after 31 March, but the notice will have been sent in time if the notice was sent by registered mail on 31 March. The notice can thus reach the Employer after 15 May, but the notice will have been sent in time if the notice was sent by registered mail on 15 May. 7. The provisions of Section 7: 677, 678, 679 and 671b of the Dutch Civil Code continue to apply in full to employment agreements that fall under the scope of this article. An Employer who has ended the employment agreement with the Employee by invoking the provisions of paragraphs 4 and 5 of this article, and then decides to continue the employment agreement with the same Employee after all, can do so only on employment conditions that are at least equal to the conditions applicable in the last year of the previously terminated employment agreement.
- 7a. In derogation from Article 6, paragraph 7, the Employer and Employee may, until 01 July of the year in which the employment agreement ends, decide – after termination of the employment agreement – to continue the employment agreement with each other after all, provided that the condition that the employment agreement will be continued on the written request of the Employee is met and provided that both agree to this continuation in writing.

Disciplinary action

With due observance of the statutory provisions, the Employer may take disciplinary action against an Employee who fails to fulfil his obligations under the employment agreement.

Explanatory notes to Article 21

Section 7: 650 of the Dutch Civil Code contains the following provisions with regard to penalties.

1. The Employer may only impose a penalty for violation of rules of the employment agreement, if the employment agreement sets out the rules in respect of which violation is punishable by a penalty as well as the amount of the penalty.
2. The agreement in which the penalty is stipulated must be in writing.

3. The agreement or the regulations in which a penalty is stipulated must give details on the intended use of the penalty. Penalties may not directly or indirectly benefit the Employer personally or the person authorised by the Employer to impose penalties on Employees.

5. The aggregate of the penalties imposed on the Employee within a single week may not exceed the Employee's monetary wage for half a day. An individual penalty may not exceed that amount.
6. Every stipulation that is in conflict with any provision of this article is void. It is permitted, however, though only with regard to Employees whose monetary wage per day exceeds the amount of the minimum wage applicable to them, to derogate by written agreement from the provisions of paragraphs 3, 4 and 5. In that case, the court will always be authorised to set the penalty at a smaller amount if it considers the penalty imposed excessive.
7. If the amount of the salary referred to in paragraph 6 is changed, the effect of the stipulations pursuant to which paragraphs 3, 4 and 5 are derogated from will be suspended with regard to those Employees whose daily wage in money does not exceed the changed amount of the minimum wage.
